I.M., G.E.

Joey is outraged at Pacey's advance but starts to question her reaction.
Henry disappoints Jen by not inviting her to his birthday, while Tricia makes Marlon's day and Rosa has an angry confrontation with Fiona Morris. Gianni, on the other hand, gets some devastating news from his solicitor.
Meanwhile, Fraser is forced to take drastic action against his ruthless new landlord and Jamie hits back at Billy.

But—what's this?!

Ted gets mad with Paul and Simone and, before you know where you are, Mandy visits her dad,
Joel's courting ends in calamity, Roy is furious to find out about Scott's underhand dealings and Bernice questions Zoe's commitment, so of course Geoff and Doreen catch Jack and Vera out and Linda tries desperately to conceal the truth about Mike's health even though Ted holds a grudge against Paul and Simone and Pollard threatens to expose Scott and the next thing you know is Danny steams ahead with his plans to marry the girl of his dreams, Joe is not happy that Flick played truant, Ashley considers a shock proposal,
Chris makes plans with Taran's money, Zak and Cain lay down the law,
Tony is annoyed that Adam stayed the night,
Tim makes things worse for Sinbad, Mick has a romantic proposition for Susannah,

Felicity stands her ground with Sean, Joel struggles with his feelings for Dione (Emily is frankly appalled), a journalist looks for Nicky di Marco, Dan continues to harass Melanie which leads Steve into taking some drastic action, Tricia realises the truth about Marlon, Gary embarks on a holiday romance, Darren is evicted and the whole fucking schemozzle ends in a welter of puke, shite and claret.
